Part II Course Details

Abstract

This course will share knowledge of art and technology, and to show how these two disciplines are interlinked in promoting psychological wellbeing. It also emphasizes the principles and cases of artworks in global, both visual and performing arts, and gives you practice in applying the knowledge to present the psychological theories and artistic material informatively and clearly. The arts can improve health outcomes for people with different psychological needs, promote wellbeing and strengthen communities by providing new opportunities for social connection. There are also significant benefits through arts and technology participation for health professionals, including personal wellbeing and access to professional development opportunities. The course involves applied, activity-based collaboration and therefore relies heavily on a team based learning.
